Discussion Questions

Summary From your reading, select five major points that you think are the most important points covered in the chapter. For each point, write a summary of the topic. Summary means a good explanation, not just a few words or one sentence, but also not a three page paper. A good paragraph is sufficient. Write your summary as if you wanted to explain the topic to a good friend or your grandmother.

Question After you complete your summary, write a concise question that will elicit a response indicating that the person answering the question understands the topic. The idea is that your question could be a test question on an examination, and that your summary could be the "correct" answer.
